

ABOUT

The mission of See the World is to give low income families the experience of travel. Whether that be locally, nationally, or even internationally.

The aims of See the World:

- To make an interactive geography experience. Children will learn about and visit places in relation to places they already know.
- To introduce children and families to new experiences and professions.
- To open up the children's realm of possibility. The more things, places, and people children are exposed to, the more they will expand their vision of and for the world.

FOUNDERS

Ilham Elazri: I am a social and emotional paraprofessional at Kennedy-Longfellow School. I am also an immigrant from Morocco, a graduate of Cambridge Public Schools, and a graduate of Bunker Hill Community College and Umass Boston.

Stephanie Guirand: I am doctoral researcher at Goldsmiths University of London in Sociology. I was born in Haiti and immigrated to the United States when I was a kid. I am a graduate of the Cambridge Public School System. I am passionate about building community and supporting important projects.

WORKING FAMILIES ARE WELCOME!

See The World is a pilot program of the Cambridge Equity Collaborative. We would like to invite parents and guardians to participate in excursions with their families. It is sometimes difficult for low income families to justify spending money on excursions.

Too often immigrant parents pay for their lack of knowledge of social and political systems in currency of time up front and dollars later in life for their children. While my parents worked two or three jobs respectively, I spent my evenings and weekends at home watching television with my sisters instead of exploring museums, or national parks, or even the universities in Cambridge. This was not the experience of my wealthier schoolmates. We do not want parents to have to choose between paying their bills and spending time with their families. We are offering parents a $150 stipend for participation in each day of See The World events.

ELIGIBILITY

- A Cambridge resident
- Have at least one child who is 10-12 years old at the Kennedy-Longfellow School.
